ANNOUNCEMENT.

For Circuit Judge.
To the voters of the Fourth Judicial District, comprising the counties of Caldwell, Livingston, Crittenden and Hopkins, I hereby make the announcement that I am a candidate for the office of Circuit Judge of said district, subject to the action of the Democratic party.
T. J. NEWS,
Marion, Crittenden Co., July 6, 1892.

TARIFF PICTURES.

According to the unanimous report of the Senate Finance subcommittee, signed by Senators Carlisle and Harris, Democrats, as well as Senators Aldrich, Allison, Hiseock and Jones, Republicans, these are the latest obtainable figures for the average wages of day laborers in England and in the United States:

England, $6.88;
United States, $1.71.

REPUBLICANISM — the people's favorite.

CAPE ELLIS voted against the World's Fair appropriation.

Our legislature has outlived its usefulness. The next thing in order would be to adjourn sine die.

In order to be consistent the Democrats should pass a bill admitting Asiatic cholera free of duty.

DEMOCRACY and its cause will drag its weary length along 'till November, then pass out of existence.

THERE is nothing the matter with the McKinley tariff law, and none know it better than the Democrats.

UP to the hour of going to press there was no information to show that our legislature contemplates adjournment.

THE exports of domestic merchandise for the fiscal year 1892 was $1,015,789,607. Verily this is a billion dollar country.

IT Tammany could be reconciled to the nomination of Cleveland that distinguished gentleman might be considered to be in the race.

TAMMANY is now flirting with Cleveland, but like the heartless summer girl, that organization will "jilt" him in the ides of November.

IT will not surprise the Republicans if West Virginia casts her electoral vote for Harrison and Reid next November.

WATKINSON is an able man, but he seems to have preferred a case of tonsillitis to a debate on the tariff question with McKinley, at Madison, Wisconsin.

WHAT does the democratic party expect of the people of Illinois? The World's Fair appropriation dose by Congress has already soured upon them. Too small a dose to take effect.

THE Republicans of West Virginia had a very enthusiastic State Convention over which Hon. Stephen B. Elkins presided. They named Hon T. E. Davis as their candidate for Governor.

JUDGE ALLIGLE, Democratic candidate for Governor of Illinois is conducting a hand-shaking campaign. It is very probable that the whole State will give him the shake about November the 8th.

THE "pennyride" democrats have just cause for complaint. Mr. Stevenson ignored them altogether when in Kentucky recently. Perhaps it is due to recollections, pure simple, that he failed to visit the home of his boyhood days.

It is unjust to say that the recent session of Congress accomplished no good results. It has given the country manifold reasons why the Democratic party should not be returned to power, and for that service alone it was worth all it cost.

MR. WATSON, the Alliance member from Georgia has stirred the wrath of his Democratic colleagues in Congress by charging certain members with drunkenness. A special committee reported against him on the facts but the plucky Georgian will not retract.

Hon. JAS. A. MCKENZIE is probably kin to Hon. A. E. Stevenson the democratic candidate for the Vice-presidency. No one has cause to doubt it for Mr. McKenzie so declared himself three different times in making a speech here on Saturday. It is to be presumed that portion of his speech, at least, was founded upon facts.

The first session of the fifty-second Congress came to an end on the 5th inst. The closing scenes were full of excitement and tumult. Senator Allison has pointed out some important and significant facts. The first session of the fifty-first Congress made appropriations amounting in round numbers to $463,000,000, while those of the present session have been $507,000,000, an increase of $44,000,000. Such is the Democratic record for economy, and yet how much noise and clatter they have made about Republican extravagance.

WHILE it would not be wise to conclude from the decreased Democratic majority in Alabama, that Harrison will get the electoral vote of that State next November, yet it is interesting to note the falling off in late years of the great Democratic majority. It is hardly just to attribute this to Republican popularity or to Democratic inactivity. It is disaffection in the Democratic ranks. The People's party made an active campaign, and their candidate, Mr. Kolb, in the late gubernatorial contest, received a majority of white votes over Mr. Jones the Democratic standard bearer. In order to overcome this, the Democrats solicited the negro vote and elected their man by the small majority of 10,000, a decrease of over 15 per cent. Will some well informed Democrat kindly explain this sudden detraction from democratic ranks and express wherein there was any fear of the "force bill" in this instance.

CAN not this district be represented in the next Congress by a Republican? While a matter of some doubt this question like others of its kind can be answered in but one way. Let a nomination be made and put to a thorough test: Have the best available man brought out. In the event of a triangular race, as will then be on, a full Republican vote cannot fail to elect the next member of Congress from the second district of Kentucky. The Executive Committee of the district should endeavor to bring about the desired result while in session here to-day. In justice to the party a candidate should be in the field, not an adopted candidate as has been whispered in some lukewarm quarters, but a thoroughbred Republican—a candidate who can poll the entire Republican vote in the district. While the district has heretofore been overwhelmingly Democratic the peculiar situation of affairs just now tends toward a revolution in the ranks of that party. The Third party draws its strength largely from the Democrats, and from the fact such disorder prevails, the Republicans would be acting unwisely not to take advantage of the glorious opportunity that now presents itself to elect one of their own kind. Let us see good work begun.

The great speech of Gov. Wm. McKinley, at Beatrice, Neb., was the key-note of the present campaign. He exposed, with irresistible logic, the absurd position assumed by the Democratic convention on the tariff question. The fact was recalled that the second act of Congress, after the adoption of the Constitution, was a bill providing for "the support of the Government, the discharge of the debts of the United States, and the encouragement and protection of manufacturers." The bill was reported by James Madison, and became a law on the approval of President Washington. He pointed to the further fact that wages in the United States are 77 per cent. higher than in England, according to the report of the Senate special committee. This per cent. being based on eight of the leading industries. Farm products have advanced, while manufactured products have declined during the last two years. New industries have been able to commence under the McKinley act, which are giving employment to more than 200,000 persons. The sale of our products and manufactured goods during last year exceeded those we imported by $203,000,000, and our export trade increased some 15 per cent. This able speech should be read by all intelligent persons who desire to examine the facts in favor of the doctrine of protection. It cannot be answered, and no person will make the effort to meet the strong array of facts which the speaker has presented.

ENGLISH TESTIMONY.

An advertisement issued by Bolling & Lowe, No. 2 Laurence Poultnery Hill, London England; under date of December 15, 1891, otherwise the steel and iron report of the company, says, among other things:

"The United States of America, under the influence of the McKinley tariff and increased home production, can no longer be considered as important buyers of steel and iron from this country, with the exception of tin plates, and even this article is now taken in reduced proportions. It was formerly an acknowledged axiom that a bad harvest in Great Britain or on the Continent, which involved the purchase of large supplies from the United States, caused a great demand from there for our manufactures of steel and iron. This rule has now, however, entirely ceased to hold good. The development of the mineral properties in the Southern States of the Union has, during the last few years, been so phenomenal that they are now fully able to make up any shortcomings which formerly rendered it necessary for the United States to order from this country."

Thus we have English testimony to the protection benefits of the McKinley bill for the United States, and a protection which extends to the Southern States fully as much as to the Northern.

ONE WAY TO GET GOOD ROADS.

Each year, within the United States, there are convicted for various offenses against the public peace, about 600,000 male prisoners of mature age. These criminals are commonly confined in the state prisons and common jails, and during the term of their punishment are largely sustained and clothed at the public expense. This expense alone entails an enormous tax, of which property in all localities must share the burden, and a most serious question has for many years been discussed touching the manner in which these convicts can be employed without competing with the skilled labor of our free citizens. No solution has yet been reached which seems to meet the case. Labor organizations have repeatedly demanded that these convicts be made to earn their own sustenance by the performance of public work notably that constructing and maintaining the public roads.

Such labor has been utilized in other countries to the great advantage of the public, and it offers such an apparent double advantage in the reduction of other public tax and the solution of the convict labor question that it is well worthy of a thorough trial. But besides the regularly convict criminals there is an immense vagrant population comprised mostly of able bodied men, drifting about from one part of the country to the other and commonly called "tramps." They have largely increased in numbers during the last few years, and have become one of the social problems of the day. It is not unlikely that if all the tramps in a given town were compelled by law to do a little work now and then upon the public roads, and thus pay tribute to the public that clothes and feeds them, the growth of this species of lazy vagrancy would be considerably checked.—American Farmer.

Special Correspondence to THE BEE.
MANITOW SPRINGS, HOPKINS CO., KY.,
Aug. 7th, 1892.

Your correspondent was becoming deeply interested in this strangely affected individual. Hitherto he has been coming to my hotel and recounting the strange things he witnesses while in the trance state. As indicated in my last letter, however, the malady had begun to tell upon him. He grew rapidly worse last week until Thursday evening, when he quietly passed into an unknown world.

During my sojourn here quite a friendship had sprung up between us, so when apprised of his early dissolution, he caused me to be sent for. I immediately went to his bedside and was much shocked at the change in his appearance, and the rapid changes taking place even as I gazed upon him I could see there was something he desired to communicate. Major W. L. Gordon had finished up some legal matters for him, when he beckoned me to his bedside, and in a husky voice began speaking by thanking me for responding so promptly to his summons, and said: "I hope I am not presuming too much upon our brief friendship, but I felt that I must see you once more before taking my final exit, besides I have a request to make of you. You have endeared yourself to me in many ways, but more especially in giving credence to my story. When I have commenced to relate my singular trance experience to others, they have believed me a crank, and even thought me demented; but with you it has ever been different. I could confide in you. I knew you were no newspaper crank and that what I told you would be held sacred, and inviolable. One of the peculiarities of my malady has been that the scenes, individuals and incidents I behold while in the trance state seem so real, vivid and life-like, I can hardly believe them fantasies." Then grasping my hand with characteristic fervency and earnestness he exclaimed, "Surely Mr. Fixit, there must be some such city as I have pictured. There must indeed, be a living, breathing, royal, happy people inhabiting that city of Madisonville."

And then easing back among his pillows, and gazing off into space in a kind of reverie, he continued, "Do you know I still sometimes 'dream that I dwell in the marble halls' of the Hotel de Bluff? That I am haunted by the old tumble down Hotel de Horse? But above and over all, there comes to my mind's eye the shadow of that strangely compounded, yet beautiful figure with the lilac healthy tint and hue so life-like and so real, which was found near the Phosterronian Fountain. Well do I remember my impressions and errors when, in removing the ashes and exploring the interior, of certain buildings, we uncovered two large round billiard balls, and supposed it to be a factory. But as more of the debris was removed we concluded they were school globes; and it was even suggested that they were weather maps, since one represented a clear zenith with a slight fringe of clouds circling the horizon; while the other seemed to represent an absolutely cloudless sky with here and there a weary wandering wingless bird, who might have sung the touching ditty with propriety, entitled 'Flea as a bird.' You may imagine our surprise and discomfiture, when a little further excavation revealed the fact that they were simply two bald heads."

I could but believe that his mind had been touched, and that he was wandering. However, I succeeded in bringing him to, when he soon wandered off again into politics and said: "It would be useless for me to make known to anyone else but your loyal, credulous self, the fact that I have already had a presentiment of the result of the coming political election. If you chance to have a 'Bill Heilmann' tendency, put your money on Harrison, Bill Ellis and Flem Gordon; for I have witnessed the second inauguration of the former and attended the ratification in honor of the two latter."

Yielding to a sudden impulse, I could not interrupt him to ask about the result of the chariot race between Ben Hur and Messala. He turned upon me an enquiring quizzical eye, and then deliberately responded, "Believing you might be inclined to favor either the one or the other of the two noble contestants, I had intended to pass them over; but since you have drawn it from me, let me respond to your eager inquiry by a brief description of the race. To say it was close, grand and exciting, would not be to exaggerate. You will remember that no detail was neglected. That they stooped to measure the size, height and weight of each others chariot's with a printer's 'stick,' oiled their axles with such enormous quantities of costly printer's ink that the people were disgusted. You remember how that they practiced the manipulation of their blooded, picked teams—the one near the spacious tents of the great Sheikh Iderim, the other 'mid the spacious groves of the princes. Truly they were both right royal hustlers, and belonged to the upper Democracy. But when the great and final day of the race did arrive, there was a dark and fiery, blooded, noble horse, which had a Republican pedigree dating away back to the old Sheikh, Abraham Lincoln entered in the race, and Ben and Messala were not 'in it at all.'"

By this time I was pretty thoroughly convinced that his mind was much clearer than I had suspected. I was about to interrogate him further upon the chariot race, when he turned suddenly and gazing at me steadily and enquiringly asked "Do you believe in Spiritualism?" I had to confess to some slight spiritualistic tendencies, which seemed to please him; and he quickly added, though in a calmer and more subdued voice, "I desire to make a solemn covenant and agreement with you. I am aware that my life is fast being away, and I cannot hope to live longer than a few hours at most. I will communicate to you a name to which I promise you, most solemnly, to respond, should you ever desire to call my spirit up in any of our seances. The name which I shall give you is of holy origin. It was the name given to one of the lineal descendants of Bezaleel, who received divine instruction in his art. The name is Ike. N. Fixit."

They were the last words he ever uttered. A moment later and the spirit of the Dreamer had taken its flight forever. I have not yet had an opportunity to test the compact entered into with him, but when I do, I feel assured he will respond promptly and skillfully, as did the ancient progenitor of the strange name. Whatever may be the result of the test seance, I will give you a faithful report.

Piles or Hemorrhoids.

This uncomfortable disease is the direct result of constipation. The hard matter in the intestines presses upon the veins, and finally engorges them in certain places with blood. Whoever has suffered from piles knows how painful and troublesome they are. To cure them we must abolish the cause, which is constipation. The patient and intelligent use of Carlsbad's German Liver powder will do it. In old and chronic cases some little time may be required, but the good result is sure to follow. A Lecture to Lovers.

Oh, you foolish, foolish little maidens, with your dainty heads so full of unreason, how often, oh how often are you to be warned that it is not always the sweetest thing in lovers that are the best material to make a good-looking husband out of? "The lover sighing like a furnace" will not go on sighing like a furnace forever. That furnace will go out. In old and chronic cases some little time may be required, but the good result is sure to follow. Price 25c. at Robinson Bros.

Much damage is done by brushing off dried mud from this calf and kid boots with hard bristle brushes, and still more by the use of common blacking. In the case of ladies' boots, made of fine and soft leather, both treatments are ruinous. When boots are very muddy, remove the dirt with a damp sponge or a painter's sash tool and a little water. Glaze kid boots, etc., should be sponged, allowed to dry and then thoroughly polished with a soft rag or handkerchief which is slightly oiled occasionally.

And still they go on, taking up lines of business which a quarter of a century ago were labelled "hands off" by the sterner sex.

McLeod & Dulin's Hats!

At the Top

OF THE Column!

That is where our new Fall Hats are, at the top of the column in quality, at the bottom of the column in price. You are entitled to a good deal of sympathy if you haven't got one; you want nobody's sympathy if you have. It is worth your while to come and investigate the truth of what we say in behalf of our Fall Hats. Cheapness itself can go no further than we have gone in putting down the prices. Excellency can go no further than we have gone in securing quality. If anything better has ever been made in the shape of a shapely hat it has yet to be discovered.

Respectfully,
McLEOD & DULIN,
Earlington, Ky.

you have married her as before, more so, if anything.

But you will not get the benefit of it. Husbands will be charmed and fascinated by her in plenty, but you will not be among them. You will run the show, you will pay all the expenses, do all the work. Your performing lady will be most affable and enchanting to the crowd. They will stare at her and admire her, and talk to her and flirt with her. And you will be able to feel that you are quite a benefactor to your fellow-men and women—to your fellow-men especially—in providing such delightful amusement for them free. But you will not get any of the fun yourself.

You will not get the handsome looks. You will get the faded face, and the dull lustreless eyes, and the untidy hair with the dye showing on it. You will not get the exquisite dresses. You will get dirty, shabby frocks and slouching dressing gowns, such as your cook would be ashamed to wear. You will not get the charm and fascination. You will get the after headaches, the complainings and grumblings, the silence and sulkiness, the weariness and lassitude and ill-temper that comes as such a relief after working hard all day at being pleasant.—Jerome K. Jerome's Pilgrimage.

A novel combination is of dark blue and emerald green. For instance, dark blue foulard or crepon, with trimmings of rich green velvet. At a recent fashionable garden party a fashionable leader wore a frock of dark blue Merveilleux satin shot and narrowly striped with emerald green. About the hem ran a narrow bouillonne of emerald velvet. The draped corslet upper sleeves and high collar were of velvet to match. A lib of fine black gauze, spangled with dark green and a lace bonnet to match, completed a most fascinating and original costume. An exceedingly stylish gown, suitable for wear at a garden party, is made of white silk striped, with lines of black interspersed with a floral design in yellow, pink and green. The plain skirt has three tucks round the hem, trimmed at the top and bottom with lace, caught with bows of yellow ribbon. The bodice has a yoke and deep shoulder frills of the lace and is crossed from back to front with yellow ribbon. The sleeves are very full. The hat is made of cream embroidery liberally threaded with gold, and is edged with brown straw and trimmed with a bunch of feathers at the back and an aigrette.

Tight shoes are going out of fashion, also high heels and pointed toes. The long slender, pointed foot is no longer considered a mark of the blue blood in Europe, and the size of the boots worn by queens and princesses of the royal blood. This information has done far more to convince the American girl, who incidentally mentions the size of her boots and the narrow last she calls for, than all the artists in sculpture have written, or even the given measurements of the Greek statues representing beauty in its highest form. The latter was dead; the former living proof that large feet and hands may go with the bluest blood and vice versa.

In the case of ladies' boots, made of fine and soft leather, both treatments are ruinous. When boots are very muddy, remove the dirt with a damp sponge or a painter's sash tool and a little water. Glaze kid boots, etc., should be sponged, allowed to dry and then thoroughly polished with a soft rag or handkerchief which is slightly oiled occasionally.

In Buffalo a woman runs a street cleaning bureau; in Kansas City a woman is in the fire department; at Vassar a woman combs hair at twenty-five cents per head; a Louisville lady makes special shopping trips to Paris; another in New Hampshire is president of a street railway company; while Chicago has a woman saboteur. And still they go on, taking up lines of business which a quarter of a century ago were labelled "hands off" by the sterner sex.
